Stirring Scene Witnessed at Tabernacle Yesterday.

ELDER JOSEPH RIDGES RECEIVES AN OVATION

How He Built America's Greatest Organ in Wilderness.

How many of the thousands who to the depths of their souls by the tones of the grandest instrument on the American continent have realized that its creator, its designer and builder, many, or public recognition would have been accorded him long before now.

This was one of a hundred kindred thoughts that swept over a mighty gathering in the Tabernacle yesterday noon when Joseph H. Ridges, bowed with age and blinded with emotion, stood forward as the builder of the Tabernacle organ and received the plaudits of ten thousand hearts and hands. There never was a prettier scene, a tribute more fitting, an outburst of gratitude and admiration more spontaneous than was offered this old man. Nor was there ever a response so eloquent, though he said not a word. many, or public recognition would have

The old man sat down. His face was buried in his hands while the last triumphant hymn, "America," was being sung by the choir. The services were then over. Men and women were seen making their way from the extreme end of the building towards the speakers' stand. Some of them were old Latter day Saints your enjoyled in speakers stand. Some of them were old Latter-day Saints, some crippled in mind and body, some were young and sprightly, all lovers or students of music, and some were total strangers to Salt Lake and the organ until yesterday. Story Told by the Man Who Built It.

Mr. Ridges lives in a little adobe house, crude as the crudest on the exterior, but neat as loving hands can make it on the interior. The home is "Now there was not a man in the stranger of the word in the frame of the organ was put into the building, or while they were putting on the roof, the first piece of wood in the frame of the organ was put into the instrument was small model of the organ and every pipe that went into the instrument was tested and tuned from this little instrument.

"For a little while we were in doubt as to whether the wood in the canyons of Utah would be suitable to the work. I went out in the territory, north and south, with a teamster and together we selected and hauled in every stick that was put into the organ. It was nearly all yellow pine. Over in Grass creek, I remember, my teamster and I had a narrow escape from the Indians, who at that time were very hostile in parts of the state. But finally we had enough timber inside the walls of the tabernacle and the year following the beginning of work on the building, or while they were putting on the roof, the first piece of wood in the frame of the organ was put into place.

Now there were in doubt to the organ and every stick and tuned from this little instrument.
